

In 1908, Charles Mack purchased a portion of property which is now known as Belfountain Conservation Area. In 1914, he opened his property to the public.

Features such as the fountain, cave and dam in Belfountain Conservation Area were built when Charles Mack owned the property.

Belfountain Conservation Area featuring the dam and suspension bridge circa early 20th century.

The historic Belfountain terrace was renovated and re-opened for use in the fall of 2016.